

If you're looking for a challenging career in a dynamic sector then why not take a closer look at logistics. It offers a wide variety of different careers with good salaries and great prospects.

One in twelve working people is employed in logistics. That's 2.2 million people spanning some 196,000 companies. And with the growth of on-line shopping the sector looks set to continue expanding for the foreseeable future.

Logistics is all about the movement and storage of goods. Everything we consume has to be transported and in today's world we want things delivered faster than ever and with excellent customer service.

To meet these challenges the logistics sector is increasingly using digital technologies to plan and control the movement of goods. Over the next five years, the sector will require an extra 658,000 workers and they will all need to have good digital skills.

The National Logistics Academy is your starting point for a wide range of careers. Our nationwide network of specialist training providers will support and train you in an apprenticeship with a good logistics employer where you will get paid as you learn the job.

The logistics sector needs bright, motivated young people to become:

- Van drivers and couriers
- HGV drivers
- Engineers, technicians and fitters
- Transport managers
- Traffic office planners
- International freight forwarders
- Warehousing and forklift truck operatives
- Supply chain managers
- Data systems specialists
- Customer service advisors

The National Logistics Academy
 Greengate, Middleton, Manchester M24 1RU
www.logisticsacademy.co.uk
 0333 220 6646